MONDAY MORNING, MARCH 15, 1858. THE POLICE INTERFERING WITH A LOVE AFFAIR-A POETIC DAMSEL.

The police have an officious way of occasionally interfering with "the best laid White Flannels, ranging in price from 163 cents and Cubeb's, Nutmegs, Mace, Bermuda Arrow schemes of mice and men," and now and then cutting short the loving anticipations of Leander Adams, a young fellow not out of his teens, who had sold a horse of his own, make room for a Spring stock.

and left his father's residence for this city, en mh 6 ASHBY & WOOD, No. 170, King st. route to join a loving girl in Fleming county, Ky. The ardent juvenile lover was taken into custody, and locked up, and on searching him at the station house, he acknowledged that he was prompted to run away from home by the receipt of a letter, which he handed to the officers, which was so pathetic and poetic that he could not resist. The letter is from his girl, and for the benefit of those who may not have a gleam of poetry in their souls, and yet may wish to quote a ly moved by love's passion, we extract a gem or two. After two or three times informing him that she "takes ber pen in hand" to communicate various facts, her imagination leads her to anticipate the future in the following

"Mary Ellen Johnson is my name, And single is my station, And happy will be the little man That makes the alteration!"

She then wants to know if he is "in the same notion" as when she saw him last, and to convince him that she is, assumes the leap year privilege, and fairly 'pops the question' in poetic style:

"If you knew how I love you, and you loved me, A married couple we would be!"

And then again, for fear he may think she is "as false as fair," and to assure him that cold weather makes no difference with her "phelinx," she sands a poetic assurance that her love will not congeal:

"I send my love, this cold and wintry day; It's faithful love, and will never die away." After a feeling reference to red roses and blue violets, and a comparison of her lover to "aweet sugar," the devoted specimen of Kentucky crinoline closes her note with a dash of defiance at all attempts to separate her from the chosen of her heart, thus: "If you love me as I love you, No sheep shears could cut our love in two!"

Unfortunately Don Lear der was overtaken here by the "cruel parient," and taken back to the parental roof by the collar; so that Mary Ellen will have to occupy her "single station" for some time longer .- Cin. Ga.

BURNINGS TO DEATH. How to prevent them .- Every now and then the public is horrified by an account of some one who has been fatally burned by his ity of these victime are females, and the reaor her clothes taking fire. The great major sons for it are very simple. Their clothing is more combustible than that of men, and it burns much more freely from the fact that it hangs loosely upon the person. Females, too, generally, have less presence of mind and coolness in an emergency than adult men, and when their clothes take fire, instead of striving to smother the flames promptly, they give them fresh vigor by flying wildly about. The fashion of wearing hoops is another aid to the spread of the flames when the clothing takes fire, as in the case of the young lady who was burnt to death, in a public school house, in New York, a few days since, the hoops in the skirts of the unfortunate victim in that instance, defeating the kind efforts of these who ran to her assistance. As all the calamities that are likely to occur is way will not effect a change in the fashion or materials of dress, the only things to be done to prevent death in this terrible way are to urge caution by way of prevention of accident from fire, and to impress upon the minds of all, the best means of extinguishing flames in clothing when they are once kindled. Every adult knows that flames burn upward, and that when a dress skirt ER, Steel Spring Iron frame Ladies TRUNKS take a horizontal position is the best for the endangered person; first, because the fire is most easily smothered in that position; secondly, because it will not burn so fiercely, and lastly, because the face is thus saved from the fire, and the great danger of breathing flames is lessened. Very frequently if persons whose clothing takes fire, were simply to roll themselves upon the floor the flamewould be deadened, and finally extinguished; while emothering the burning part with a strip of carpet, a rug, a coat, or anything of the kind that may be near at hand, will almost invariably accomplish the desired end. Sometimes the blazing garment may be torn off before it is too late, the fire may be put out by doubling up the burning material, or a vessel of water, which can be used with good effect, may be near at hand. All summed up as follows: 1st, carefully avoid setting fire to your clothing; 2nd, if your garments take fire, do Cane and Wood seat Sitting Chairs, Sidenot run about the house or out in the open | boards, Dressing Bureaus, (marble top and plain;) air, fanning the flame as you run; 3d, lose | marble top and plain Wash Stands, marble top no time in getting yourself into a horizontal position; 4th, roll over on the floor, or double Bedsteads, of all patterns; such as high, Fieldup your blazing dress so as to make it as ing, French, low-post, and Trundle Bedsteads, compact as possible; 5th, if a loose carpet or several patterns of Cottage Bedsteads, Hatanything of the kind is at hand, smother the racks, Wardrobes, Looking Glasses, and a large flames with it; and 6th, and last and above all, whether you are a victim or a looker on, keep as cool as possible, and do not lose your presence of mind .- Philadelphia Bullitin.
